A. Read the text and choose the phrase that best expresses the main cause of Andrea's problems at school.

- a) Miss Maynard is always complaining.
- b) Andrea forgets to deliver sick notes.
- c) Andrea doesn't do her homework.
- d) Andrea's parents have got divorced.

Andrea's parents got divorced. Now she spends her life between two new homes. Carrie is her stepmother.

Miss Maynard is my headmistress. I had to go and see her the other day. She started off being quite friendly and she even offered me one of her special toffees but then she started:

"It's just not good enough, Andrea. Your schoolwork's no good this year. You don't hand your homework in on time, or you don't even bother to do it. You don't have your Physical Education kit for your lessons. You don't bring a proper sick note when you've been off school. What's going on, mmm?"

My teeth got jammed in this thick piece of toffee, so I couldn't say anything in response. Anyway, how could I explain properly? I'm so busy moving from my Mum's place to Dad's and back again that I leave half my stuff behind. I hand Mum my Physical Education stuff to go in the wash and then I forget to take it with me to Dad's. It's no use expecting Carrie to do it. She washes but she doesn't even iron anything and I get teased when I'm at Dad's because my school blouses are all crumpled. Once they went pink because Carrie put my stuff in with a scarlet sweater. Carrie didn't even say she was sorry. She said she thought the pink shirt looked lovely with my dark green uniform, much better than boring old white.

I don't always bring a sick note because I forget to ask Mum or Dad... and maybe just occasionally I'm not exactly sick, I'm just staying off school because I've got fed up with it. No one knows. I pretend to Mum or Dad that I'm going to school and I get on all the right buses, but I don't always get off in the right place. I walk about the town instead. Sometimes I go to the garden in Larkspur Lane and I spend hours and hours there.
