1. Read the text and choose the title that best expresses the main idea.

- a) Father and son go to football match.
- b) Rattles are out of fashion.
- c) Boy humiliated by football fans.
- d) Crowd shouts "Don't shoot."

When I was about ten years old, I used to go and watch Brighton and Hove Albion football club with my father. I used to stand on a box and thrill at the whole spectacle. I was mesmerized not just by the football, but by all the cheering, chanting, and the rattattat sound of the rattles. The rattles particularly. I don't think you see or hear them any more, they seem 5 to have fallen out of fashion.

One Christmas, I got given a toy machinegun. When you pulled the trigger, it made exactly the sound of a rattle. I decided I would take it to the next game and fire it off. I can't think why, but my heart was set on it, and my father and I embarked on the twenty-minute walk to the ground and I carried my toy machinegun in my hand.

10 Just before we reached the turnstile, two much bigger boys saw the gun and put their hands in the air shouting "Don't shoot!" Suddenly all eyes seemed to be on me. There was much laughter. I felt humiliated. The moment passed quickly but there were still a few little jokes being made about the gun by the people in the queue behind us. I was distraught that when we went into the ground the whole crowd would turn towards me and shout "Don't shoot!
15 Don't shoot!"

I looked up at my father and he was smiling at some of the jokers. It was all right for him – it hadn't been his idea to bring the gun.

I asked him to take the machinegun and put it under his coat. He told me not to be silly, but then when I asked him again, and he could see the tears welling up in my eyes, he did 20 what a father has to do in these situations – he had to watch a football match while holding a toy machinegun.
