WE'RE NOT JUST KIDS ANYMORE

Linkin Park* is back. But it's not the Linkin Park that we were used to: it is trying a different sound with the new album Minutes To Midnight. In fact, it's now difficult to classify the band as rap-rock. A couple of tracks are classic Linkin Park, but the rest of the album has a pop-rock vibe with influences from U2, Coldplay and even gospel church choirs.

5 Musically, Linkin Park is softer. Lyrically, it has become more serious and socially-conscious. It now deals with topics like war and the environment. Actually, the band has always been socially aware. It participated in the Philadelphia concert of Live 8, organized by Bob Geldof, which raised millions of dollars to help Africa.

10 For the first time, the six members – singer Chester Bennington, 31, rapper Mike Shinoda, 30, guitarist Brad Delson, 30, bassist Dave 'Phoenix' Farrell, 30, DJ Joe Hahn, 30, and drummer Rob Bourdon, 28 – appear on the cover of an album. And instead of the complicated artwork or graphic designs on their previous album covers, Minutes To Midnight shows the silhouettes of the six in suits. As for their new style, Bennington said: "Well, the band finally let me dress them! I also wanted to 'elevate' the look of Linkin Park, to appear more uniform, like a group and not look like just half a dozen kids." He added: "We're all grown up and more mature, and I think the guys are feeling comfortable being rock stars."
